Career paths built on an extraordinary past

The Department of History at A&M-Commerce acquaints students with the past, offering insight into the historic process and skills for responsible citizenship in our interconnected world. Challenging courses ranging from the study of the ancient world to an exploration of race and education in the 20th century will give you the understanding of yesterday required to succeed today.

To foster your professional development, our department encourages your participation in conferences for organizations such as the Texas State Historical Association and Phi Alpha Theta, the National History Honor Society. After mastering the skills necessary for in-depth research, complex analysis and cogent writing, you will hold a degree that offers entry into careers such as teaching, museum and archival work, genealogical services, law, politics, government service, publishing and public relations.

Undergrad

Graduate
PROGRAMS

Our undergraduate curriculum offers four distinct tracks. The tracks focused on training teachers provide excellent preparation for the required state certification exams. The non-teaching track is designed for students interested in working in higher education, public history or business.
